Partial repeal of section 9 of "The Public Revenues Act, 1872." Balance of imprests not to exceed £120,000 of Special Funds.

Public Revenues Acts Amendment.

Offices of Auditor-General and Comptroller of Public Account abolished on present holders of such offices ceasing to hold the same.

And whereas it is expedient that upon either of the persons now holding either of the offices of Auditor-General or Comptroller of the Public Account ceasing to hold such office, no new appointment should be made to the office so vacated, but that the same should cease to exist:

10. No appointment under the sixth section of this Act shall be made until one of the offices of Auditor or Comptroller aforesaid shall be vacant; and upon the happening of a vacancy in either of the said offices of Auditor or Comptroller, a Commissioner shall be appointed under the said section of this Act.

11. The Commissioners appointed under this Act shall be Joint Commissioners of Audit within the meaning of the said second section of "The Public Revenues Act, 1872:" Provided that so long as the offices of Auditor and Comptroller aforesaid are held, then the persons holding such offices shall continue to be such Joint Commissioners of Audit; and when, upon the first happening of a vacancy in either of the said offices of Auditor or Comptroller, a Commissioner under this Act shall be appointed, then, until the other of the said offices of Auditor
